

GUIDELINES FOR EFFECTIVE EDUCATION

An Orff Schulwerk workshop series with Doug Goodkin

For well over three decades, Doug has been trying to articulate the details of what helps good teachers teach better. This series will work with some of the ideas summarized in his forthcoming book on the subject. Though music-teaching through the Orff approach is at the center of the workshops, the ideas, processes and material are relevant for teachers of all subjects. Administrators welcome!

Saturday, September 10, 2011 — 9:30-4:30

THE VIEW FROM ABOVE: Getting Started

This opening workshop will feature musical activities for all ages, with attention to the details of developing material. The importance of playful exploration, direct experience and repetition with variation will be modeled and discussed. Come start your year off with great material, useful ideas and fun activities.

Saturday, October 22, 2011 — 9:30- 4:30

INTEGRATING THE ARTS: With Sofía López-Ibor

This special addition to the workshop series celebrates Sofia's remarkable new book, Blue Is the Sea. She will be featuring the theme of integrated arts, combining visual art, music, dance, drama and poetry. Not to be missed!

Saturday, January 21, 2012 — 9:30-4:30

FROM THE LESSON TO THE CURRICULUM: Developing Material

This workshop will look at the connecting threads between lessons that move like a symphony from an opening theme to a long development and then a recapitulation in a final performance. Along the way, we'll look at some useful guidelines for differentiated instruction, assessment and curriculum.

Saturday, March 10, 2012 — 9:30-4:30

360 DEGREE EDUCATION: Connected learning

This workshop goes beyond the details of mere music education to using music as a path to history, culture and community building. Jazz will be the musical focus and its story the cultural context for honoring the past, enjoying the present and building the future.

Location: The San Francisco School, 300 Gaven St., SF, CA 94134
